M. Yates in the Character of Himena .

My duty, Sir, hath spoken, &kneels for Judgement.

Bublifed by Harrison & C? Feb. 1.1781 .

Act.T.

M. Yates in the Character of Himena .

My duty, Sir, hath spoken, &kneels for Judgement.

Bublifed by Harrison & C? Feb. 1.1781 .

Act.T.

XIMENA;

OR, THE

HEROICK DAUGHTER.

A

TRAGEDY.

As it is Acted at the

THEATRES-ROYAL

IN

Drury-Lane and Covent-Garden.

By Mr. CIBBER.

Digna, et in omne Virgo.
Nobilis Ævum.

Hor.

LONDON;

Printed for HARRISON and Co. No 18, Paternoster-Row: and Sold, likewise J. WERMAN, Fleet-Street; and all other Booksellers.

M DCC LXXXI.

G U PROLO

fair, loofe paffion bear, A S oft in form'd a The firait-lac'd Beyond Jet bounds no le auft address, But secret flame in distant sighs express; Yet if by change some gay esquette sails in, A joyous murmur breaks the filent scene; Each beart, relieved by her enlive ning sire, Feels easy bope, and unconfin'd defire: Then souddering prudes with secret envy burn, And treat the foot, they could not catch, with scorn. So plays are valued; not confined to rules, Those prudes, the criticks, call them, feasts for fools:
And if an audience gainst those rules is warm'd,
Or by the lawless force of genius charm'd,
Their whole confederate body is alarm'd; Then every feature's false, though ne'er so taking,
The heart's deceiv'd, though 'tis with pleasure aking;
They'll prove your charmer's not agreeable:
Thus far'd it with the Cid of fam'd Corneille.
In France 'twas charg'd with faults were past en-Buring,

But fill bad beauties that were fo alluring, It rais'd the envy of the grave Richlieu, And spite of his remarks, cramm'd houses drew: Of this affertion if the truth you'll know, Two lines will prove it from the great Bollean: En vain contre le Cid un ministre fe ligue, Tout Paris pour Chimene a les yeux de Rodrigue. In wain against the Cid the statesman arms, Paris with Rodrick seels Ximena's charms. This proves, when passion truly wrought appears, In plays imperfest, 'twill command your tears: Yet think not from what's said, we rules despise, To raise your wonder from absurdities:
As France improved it from the Spanish pen,
We hope, now British, 'tis improved agen:
And though lost Tragedy has long seem d dead,
Yet having lately rais'd her awful head, To-night with pains and coft we bumbly fires To keep the spirit of that talte alive : But if, like Phaeton, in Corneille's car, Th' unequal muse unbappily should err, At least you'll own from glorious beights sho fell, And there's some merit in attempting well.

SARY.

ILOG U

Spoken by XIMENA.

Well, Sirs ! I'M come to tell you, that my fears are over, I've feen papa. and have fecur'd my lover. And, troth, I'm wholly on our author's fide, For bad (as Corneille made tim) Gormaz dy'a, My part had ended as it fift begun, And teft me fill unmarry d, and undone, Or, what were harder far than both-a nun.

The French, for form indeed, postpones the wedding, But give ber bopes within a year of bedding. Time could not tie ber marriage-knot with bonour, The father's death fill left the guilt upon ber a The Frenchman flopp'd ber in that fore'd regard, The bolder Briton weds ber in reward: He knew your tafte would ne'er endure their billing Should be so long deferr'd, when both were willing.
Tour formal Dons of Spain an age might wait,
But English appetites are sharper set.
'Tis true, this difference we indeed discover, That, though like lions you begin the lover, To do you right, your fury soon is over. Beside, this scene thus changed, the moral hears, That wirtue never of relief despairs: But while true love is still in plays ill-fated, No wonder you gay sparks of pleasure bate it— Bloodshed discourages what should delight you, And from a wife, what little rubs will fright you! And wirtue not confider'd in the bride, How foon you yawn, and curfe the knot you've ty'd! How oft the nymph, whose pitying eyes give quarter, Finds in her captive she has caught a Tartar! While to ber spouse, that once so bigh did rate berg She kindly gives ten thou fand pounds to bate her.

So, on the other fide, some fighing swain,

That languistes in love whole years in vain,

Impatient for the feast, resolves he'll have her,

And in his hunger wows he'll east for ever; He thinks of nothing but the honey-moon; But little thought be could have din'd so soon. Is this not true? Speak, dearies of the pit, Don't you find too bow berribly you're bit? For the infruction, therefore, of the free, Our author turns bis just catasfrond Before you wed, let love be underflood, Refine your thoughts, and chase it from the blood: Nor can you then of lasting joys despair, For when that circle holds the British fair, Your bearts may find beroick daughters there.

Personæ. Dramatis

M E

DON FRADINAND, King of Caftile. Den ALVAREZ, his late General, and Father of Don Carlos.

DON GORMAZ, Count of Gorma General, and Father of Ximena. Count of Gormaz, the prefent DON CARLOS, in leve with Ximena. DON SANCHEZ, his fecret Rival, though lately betrothed to Belzara. Don GARCIA, Officers.

A Page.

W ME 0

XIMENA, Daughter to Gormaz. BRLBARA, her Friend, forfaken by Don Sanches SCENE, the Royal Palace in SEVILLE.

1

M

T

Sir Be No

W

'Ti Yo

Rec For

The

He

She

And In t War Wou

The

Tha

The To f

A

Ca

The

The

Appr She I

When

This

To ci Nay, Chief

0! 1

And I

Ala

Car

Repol

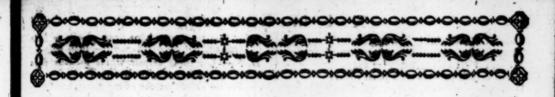

Thou

And to

Keep Car. May y Unite

But fe

Alz

XIMENA.

ACT I.

Z

14

er.

er of efent

ately

ches

44

Enter Alvarez and Carlos.

My mortal foe! The king enjoins it, faidft thou?
Let me not think thou couldit descend to ask it.
Take heed, my son, nor let the daughter's eyes
Succeed in what the father's sword has fail'd;
Since I to age have stood his hate unmov'd,

Be not thou vanquish'd by her female wiles,
Nor stain thy honour with insulted love. [tues,
Car. O, taint not with so hard a thought her virWhich she has prov'd fincere, from obligations.
'Tis to her suit I owe my late advancement:
You know, my lord, the fortune of this sword
Redeem'd her from the Moors, when late their capFor which, at her return to court, she swell'd [tive;
The action with such praises to the king,
He bade her name the honours could reward it;
She, conscious of our houses' hate, surpriz'd,
And yet distaining that her heart should fall
Ia thanks below the benefit receiv'd,
Warm'd with th' occasion, begg'd his royal favour
Would rank me in the field, the next her sheet.

The king comply'd, and with a smile insisted,
That from her own fair hand I should receive
The grace. This forc'd me then to visit her:
To say what follow'd from our interview,
Might tire, at least, if not offend your ear.
Alw. Not so, my Carlos; but proceed.
Car. In brief;

The queen, who now in highest favour holds
The fair Ximena, soon perceiv'd our passion,
Approv'd and cherish'd it; our houses' discord
She knew of old, had often shook the state;
Whereon she kindly to the king propos'd
This happy union, as the sole expedient
To cure those wounds, and fortisy his throne:
Nay, she, Ximena, if I know her thoughts,
Chiefly to that regard resigns her heart.
O! she disclaims, contemns her beauty's power,
And builds no merit but on stable virtue.

Alw. If fo, I should indeed applaud her spirit.

Car. Oh! had you search'd her soul like me, you would Repose your life, your fame, upon her truth.

Alv. On thee at least I'm sure I may; I know
Thou lov'st thy honour equal to Ximena,
And to that guard I dare commit thy love,
Keep but that union sacred.

Car. When I break it,
May your displeasure, and Ximena's scorn,
Unite their force to torture me with shame—
But see, she comes! her eye, my lord, has reach'd
you.

Mark her concern, the fortness of her fear,

O'ercast with doubt and diffidence to meet you: One gentle word from you would chase the cloud, And let forth all the lustre of her soul.

Alw. Hail, fair Ximena! beauteous brightness, Propitious be this meeting to us all. [hail! With equal joy and wonder I furvey thee. How lovely's virtue in so bright a form! Thy father's fierceness all is lost in thee; Well have thy eyes reproach'd our houses' jars, And calm'd the tempests that have wreck'd our

What we with false resentments but inflam'd, Thy nobler virtues have appeas'd with honour.

Xim. These praises from another mouth, my lord,

Might dye these glowing cheeks with crimson thame;

But as they flow thus kindly from Alvares, From the heroick fire of my deliverer, As you bestow 'em, my exulting heart, The' undeferv'd, receives with joy the found; But for those virtues you sscribe to me, Alas! they are but copy'd all from thence; Carlos, I faw, was brave, victorious, great, Compaffionate-I am at beft but grateful-Could I be less reduc'd with obligations? Could I retain our houses' ancient hate, When Carlos' deeds fo greatly had forgot it? If Heav'n had will'd our feuds fould never end, It would have chose some other arm to fave me a But if it's kinder Providence decrees, Ximena's yielded heart fould cure those ills, And bind our passions in the chains of peace; Be witness thar, all-gracious Heaven, I've gain'd The end, the haven of my hopes on earth, And fill'd the proudest fails of my ambition!

Ale. O, Carlos, Carlos, we are both subdu'd!
Where can such heavenly sweetness find a foe?
What Gormaz may resolve, his heart can teil,
But mine no longer can resist such virtue;
His pride perhaps may triumph o'er my weakness,
And wrong Ximena to insult Alvarez a
Be mine that shame, but then be mine this glory,

That I furrender to his daughter's merit
All that her heart demands, or mine can give:
If he's obdurate, let her wrongs reproach him.

Enter Sanches, and Alonso observing them.

No thanks, my fair; for both or neither are Oblig'd: whatever may be due to me,
Let love and mutual gratitude repay.

D. San. Death to my eyes! Alvarez joins their hands! [Afide. Alon. Forbear! is this a time for jealoufy?

D. San. Thou, that haft patience, then, relieve my torture. [Afide.

As

Car. Oh, Ximena! how my heart's oppress'd
Thou giv ft me a confusion equal to [with shame—
My joy; I yet am laggard in my duty;
Laut despair to reach with equal virtues

Dread Gormaz' heart, as thou hast touch'd Alvarez'.

Xim. That hope we must to Providence resign;
The king intends this day to sound his temper,.

Which, tho' severe, I know is generous,'
In honour great, as in resentments warm,

Fierce to the proud, but to the gentle yielding:
The goodness of Alvarez must subdue him.

Alon. My lord, I heard the king enquiring for you.

Alo. Sir, I attend his majefty—I thank you.

Xim. Saw you the count, my father, in the prefence?

[ftant.

Alon. Madam, I left him with the king this in-Withdrawn to th' window, and in conference. Xim. 'Twas his command I should attend him there.

Alv. Come, fair Ximena, if thy father's ear Inclines like mine, unprejudic'd to hear; His hate fubdu'd will publick good regard, And crown thy virgin virtues with reward.

Exempt Alv. Car. Xim.

D. San. Help me, Alonzo, help me, or I fink!

Th' oppression is too great for nature's frame,
And all my manhood reels beneath the load;

O rage! O torment of successless love!

Alon. Alas! I warn'd you of this storm before,

Yet you, incredulous and deaf, despis'd it;
But since your hopes are blasted in their bloom,
Since vow'd Ximena never can be yours,
Forget the folly, and resume your reason:

Recover to your vows your love betroth'd,
Return to honour, and the wrong'd Belzara. [ness,
D. San. Why dost thou still obstruct my happi-

D. San. Why dost thou still obstruct my happ And thwart the passion that has seiz'd my soul? A friend should help a friend in his extremes, And not create, but dissipate his sears.

Tis true; I see Ximena's heart is given, But then her person's in a father's power; He, I've no cause to sear, will slight my offers. Thou know'st th' aversion that he bears Alvarez Bars like a rock her wishes from their harbour: While Carlos has a sear, shall I despair? Has not the count his passions too to please, And will he starve his hate to seed her love? May I not hope he rather may embrace The fair occasion of my timely vows, To torture Carlos with a sure despair, And force Ximena to assist his triumph? Nay, she perhaps, when his commands are fix'd, in pride of virtue may resist her love, Suppress the passion, and resign to duty. [quie Alon. Why will you tempt fuch feas of wild dif-When honour courts you in a calm to joy? Belzara's charms are yielded to your hopes, Contracted to your vows, and warm'd to love: Ximena scarce has knowledge of your stame, Without reproach she racks you with despair, And must be perjur'd could her heart relieve you.

Forget it, smother in her arms the thought,
And drown the charming falshood in the joy.

Aion. What wild extravagance of youthful heat

Obscures your honour, and destroys your reason?

D. San. I am not of that lifeless mould of men,
That plod the beaten road of virtuous love;

With me, 'tis joyous beauty gives defire,
Defire by nature gives infinctive hope;
The phonix woman fets herfelf on fire,
Hope gives us love, our love makes them defire,
And in the flames they raife, themselves expire.

Alon. Nor love, nor hope, can give you here fuccels. [their bounds,

D. San. Let those despair whose passions have Whose hopes in hazards, or in dangers die a Shew me the object worthy of my slame, Let her be barr'd by obligations, friends, By vows engag'd, by pride, aversion, all The common tets that give the virtuous awe, My love would mount the tow'ring falcon's height, Cut thee't them all, like yielding air, my way, And downward dart me rapid on my quarry.

Aion. Farewel, my lord, fome other time perhaps
This rapture may subfide, and want a friend;
I shall be glad to advise when you can hear.
But see, Belzara comes, with eyes confus'd,
That speak some new disorder in her heart.
Would you be happy, friend, be just; preserve
Inviolate the honest wows you've made her.
Farewel; I leave you to embrace th' occasion. [Exit.

Enter Belzara.

Bel. I come, Don Sanchez, to inform you of A wrong, that near concerns our mutual honour; 'Tis whifper'd thro' the court, that you retract Your folemn yows by contract made to me, And with a perjur'd heart pursue Kimena: Such false reports should perish in their birth: I've done my honest part, and disbeliev'd 'em, Do yours, and by your vows perform'd destroy them.

D. San. Madam, this tender care of me, deferred Acknowledgments beyond my power to pay; But virtue always is the mark of malice, Contempt the best return that we can make it.

Bel. Virtue should have so strict a guard, as not To suffer ev'n suspicion to approach it. For tho', Don Sanchez, I dare think you just, Yet while the envious world believes you salse, I seel their insults, and endure the shame.

D.San. Malice succeeds when it's report's believ's; Seem you to flight it, and the monster's mute.

Bel. I could have hop'd fome cause to make me This cold concern to satisfy my fears, [sight it Proclaims the danger, and confirms them true.

D. San. Then you believe me faife?

Bel. Believe it! Heaven!

Am I to doubt what, ev'n your looks, your work,
Your faint evalions faithlefuly confess?

Ungrateful man! when you betray'd my heart,
You should have taught me too to bear the wrong.

D. San. When tears with menaces relieve that grief,
They flow from pride, not tenderness diffrest'd.

Bol. Insulting, horrid thought! Am I accus'd
Of pride, complaining from a breaking heart?

D. San. Behold th' unthrifty proof of woman't Pursue you with the fighs of faithful passion, some You starve our pining hopes with painted coyness; But if our honest hearts distain the yoke, Or seek from sweet variety, relief, Alarm'd to lose, what you despis'd secure, Your trembling pride retracts it's haughty air, And yields to love, pursuing when we fly. These lavish tears when I deserv'd your heart, Had held me fighing to be more your slave; But to bestow them when that heart's broke loose When more I merit your contempt than love, Arraigns your justice, and acquits my falshood.

Bel. Injurinus, falle, and barbarous reproach!
Have I witheld my pity from your fight,
Or us'd with rigour my once boundless power!
Am I not sworn by testify'd confent,
By solemn rows contracted, yielded yours!
But what avails the force of truth's appeal,
Where th' offender is himself the judge?

Hear You The 'Tw To I Since Seek You

But

1 am

Hen

D

Xim
A fla
How
I nei
Nay,
Ba
I nee
Thy Puni
Xim

To h
Ther
And Gase
Fami
Still Purf

Whi

Thy

All me At fi But ; Whe She i And Oh, And A m

D. For p Ester All Be w Kin Tho' Have

Your And Alas Held Whice How Of fe

And Whole Whill Or fa Is the If vio

But o

But yet, remember, tyrant, while you triumph, I am Don Henrick's daughter, whom you dare be-here

nds,

have ight,

hape

Exit.

of

urj

hem.

fervet

t.

,

ier'd;

te mt

ht it;

ords,

,

ong.

cheit

rd.

19'4

mus't

love

els;

loofe

h

net

Henrick; whose fam's revenge of injur'd honour, Dures step as deep in blood, as you in provocations! D. San. Since then your seeming grief's with fage reliev'd,

Hear me with temper, Madam, once for all.
You urge our folemn contract fworn; I own
The fact, but must deny the obligation;
'Twas not to me, but to a father's will,
To Henrick's dread commands, your pride submitsince then your merit's to obedience due, [ted.
Seek your reward from duty, not from Sanchez:
Your slights to me live yet recorded here,
Nor can your forc'd submissions now remove them:
Ximena's softer heart has rais'd me to
A same, that gives at once revenge and rapture.
How far Don Henrick may resent the change,
I neither know, nor with concern shall hear:
Nay, trust your injur'd patience to instame him.

Bel. Inhuman, vain provoker of my heart!

Bel. Inhuman, vain provoker of my heart!
I need not urge the ills that must o'ertake thee;
Thy giddy passions will, without my aid,.
Punish their guilt, and to themselves be fatal.
Ximena's heart is fix'd as far above
Thy hopes, as truth and virtue from thy soul.
To her avenging scorn I yield thy love;
There, faithless wretch, indulge thy vain defires,
And stave, like tortur'd Tantalus, in plenty;
Gase on her charms forbidden to thy taste,
Famish'd and pining at the tempting scast,
Still rack'd, and reaching at the flying fair,

Pursue thy faishood, and embrace despair. [Exit. D. San. So raging winds in furious storms arise, Whirl o'er our heads, and are when past forgotten.

Alm. Why, Sanchez, are you still resolv'd on I met Belzara in disorder'd haste: [ruin? At sight of me she stopt, and would have spoke, But grief, alas, was grown too strong for words: When turning from my view her mournful eyes, She burst into a show'r of gushing tears; And in the consict of her shame retir'd: Oh, yet collect your temper into thought, And shun the precipice that gapes before you: A moment hence, convinc'd, your eyes will see Ximena parted from your hopes for ever! [quiets? D. Sas. Why doft thou double thus my new differ pains foreseen are felt before they come.

Estr King, Gormas, Alvares, Carlos, Ximena, &c.

Alon. Behold the king, Alvarez, and her father! Be wife, the' late, and profit from the iffue. King. Count Gormaz you, and you Alavarez, hear; The in the camp your fwords, in court your counsel, Have justly rais'd your fame to envy'd heights, Yet let me ftill deplore your race and you, That from a long descent of lineal heat Your private feuds as oft have shook the state; And what's the fource of this upheld defiance? Alas! the stubborn claim of ancient rank, Held from a two days antedated honour, Which gave the younger house pre-eminence. How many valiant lives have eas'd our foes Of fea:, destroy'd by this contested title!
And what's decided by this endless valour? Whose honour yet confesses the superior? While both dare die, the quarrel is immortal : Or fay that force on one part has prevail'd, Is there such merit in unequal frength? If violence is virtue, brutes may boaft it : Lions with lions grapple, and dispute; But men are only great, truly victorious,

When with superior reason they subdue.

Can you then think you are in honour bound.

To heir the follies of your ancestors?

Since they have left you wirtues and renowing.

Transmit not to posterity their blame.

Alv. and Gor. My gracious lord— King. Yet hold; I'll hear you both. Of your compliance, Gorman, I've no doubt; This quarrel in your nobler break was dying, Had not, Alvaron, you reviv'd it.

.4/p. I!

Wherein, my gracious lord, ftand I suspected?

King. What else could mean that sulten gloom

you wore,
That confcious discontent, so ill conceal'd
In your abrupt retirement from our court,
When late the valiant count was made our general?

Was't not your own request you might refign it?
Which tho, 'tis true, you long had fill'd with hoWas it for you to circumfer be our choice? Inour,
T' oppose from private hate, the publick good,
And in his case, whose merit had preferr'd him?
When his fierce temper, from reflection calm,
Inclin'd to let the embers of his heat expire,
Was it well done thus to revive the flame,
To wake his jealous honour to resentment,
And shake that union we had laid to heart?
If thou hast aught to urge, that may desend
Thy late behaviour, or accuse his conduct,
Unfold it free, we are prepar'd to hear.

Unfold it free, we are prepar'd to hear.

Alw. Alas, my lord! the world misjudges me, My hate suppos'd is not so deeply rooted; Age has allay'd those severs of my honour, And weary Nature now would rest from passions. The noble count, whose warmer blood may boil, Perhaps is still my foe: I am not his, Nor envy him those honours of his merit. Where virtue is, I dare be just, and see it. Your majesty has spoke your wisdom in Your choice, for I have seen his arm deserve it. In all the sieges, battles I have won, I knew not better to command, than he To execute: those wreathes of victory That flourish still upon this hoary brow, Impartial I confess, his active sword. Has lopt from heads of Moors, and planted there.

King. How has report, my Gormaz, wrong'd this man?

Alv. Nor was the cause of my retirement more, Than that I sound it time to ease my age, Unsit for farther action, and bequeath

My fon the needless pomp of my possessions.

King. Is't possible? could'st thou conceal this Could secret virtue take so firm a root, [goodness? While slander like a canker kill'd its beauties? Gormaz, if yet thou art not passion's slave, Take to thyself the glory to reward him.

Cor. My lord, the passions that have warm'd

Yet never firr'd but in the cause of honour.
Honour's the spring that moves my active life,
And life's a torment while that right's invaded.
Shew me the man whose merit claims my love,
Whose milder virtues modestly assail me,
And honour throws me at his feet submissive.
In proof of this, there needs but now to own,
The generous advances of Alvarez,
Have turn'd my sierce resentments into shame.
What can I more? My words but faintly speak me.
But since my king seems pleas'd with my converMy heart and arms are open to embrace him. [ston,

King, Receive him, foldier, to thy heart, and give

Your king this glory of your mutual conquest. [They embrace.

Xim. Auspicious omen!
Car. O transporting hope!
D. San. Adders and serpents mix in their em-

King. O Gormaz! O Alvarez! stop not here,
Consine not to yourselves your stinted virtue,
But in this noble ardour of your hearts,
Secure to your posterity your peace:

Behold the lifted hands that beg the bleffing,
The hearts that burn to ratify the joy,
And to your heirs unborn transmit the glory.

Gor. Receive her, Carlos, from a father's hand, Whose heart by obligations was subdu'd.

Alv. Accept, Ximena, all my age holds dear, Not to my bounty, but thy merit due.

King. O manly conqueft! O exalted worth!

King. O manly conqueft! O exalted worth!
What honours can we offer to applaud it?
To grace this triumph of Ximena's eyes,
Let publick jubilee conclude the day.
Sound all our fprightly inftruments of war,
Fifes, clarions, trumpets, fpeak the general joy.

Alv. Raife high the clangor of your lofty notes, Sound peace at home.

Gor. And terror to our foes.

King. Let the loud cannon from the ramparts

Gor. And make the frighted shores of Africk ring. Car. Long live, and ever glorious live, the king! [Trumpets and vollies at a distance.

Alv. O may this glorious day for ever fland Fam'd in the rolls of late recorded time.

King. This happy union fix'd, my lords, we now Must crave your counsel in our state's defence—Letters this morn alarm us with designs
The Moors are forming to invade our realms:
But let them be, we're now prepar'd to meet them.
The prince that would fit free from foreign fears,
Should first with peace compose intestine jars;
Of hearts united while secure at home,
His rash invaders to their graves must come:

ACT II.

Enter Don Sanchez.

D. San. R ELENTLESS fortune! thou hast done thy part,
Neglected nothing to oppose my love.
But thou shalt find, in thy despight, I'll on;
Wert thou not blind indeed, thou had'st foreseen
The honour done this hour to old Alvarez,
His being nam'd the prince's governor,
(Which I well know th' ambitious Gormaz aim'd at)
Must like a wildsire's rage embroil their union,
Rekindle jealousies in Gormaz' heart,
Whose fatal slame must bury all in asses.
But see, he comes, and seems to ruminate
With pensive grudge the king's too partial favour.

Enter Gormaz on the other Side.

Gor. The king methinks is sudden in his choice—
'Tis true, I never sought (but therefore is Not less the merit) nor obliquely hinted,

That I desir'd the office—He has heard

Me say, the prince his son I thought was now

Of age to change his prattling semale court,

And claim'd a governor's instructive guidance—
Th' advice it seems was sit—but not the adviser—
Be't so—why is Alvarez then the man?

He may be qualify'd—I'll not dispute——

But was not Gormaz too of equal merit?

Let me not think Alvarez plays me foul—

That cannot be—he knew I would not bear it—
And yet why he's fo fuddenly preferr'd—

I'll think no more on't—time will foon refolve me,

D. San. Not to diffurb, my lord, your graver

May I prefume—

[thoughts

Gor. Don Sanchez may command me.

This youthful lord is fworn our house's friend,
If there's a cause for jealous thought, he'll fine it.

[Asia.

D. San. I hear, my lord, the king has fresh at-

Of a defign'd invasion from the Moors, Holds it confirm'd, or is it only rumour?

Gor. Such new alarms indeed his letters bring, But yet their grounds feem'd doubtful at the council, D. San. May it not prove fome policy of flate? Some bugbear danger of our own creating? The king I have observ'd is skill'd in rule, Perfect in all the arts of tempering minds, And—for the publick good—can give alarm: Where fears are not, and hush them where they are, Gor. 'Tis so! he hints already at my wrongs.

D. San. Not but such prudence well becomes a prince.

For peace at home is worth his dearest purchase:
Yet he that gives his just resentments up,
Tho' honour'd by the royal mediation,
And sees his enemy enjoy the fruits,
Must have more virtues than his king to bear it—
Perhaps, my lord, I am not understood,
Nay, hope my jealous sears have no foundation;
But when the ties of friendship shall demand it,
Don Sanchez wears a sword that will revenge you.

Gor. Don Sanches, flay—I think thou art my Thy noble father oft has ferv'd me in [friend:
The cause of honour, and his cause was mine.
What thou hast said, speaks thee Balthazar's son,
I need not praise thee more——If I deserve
Thy love, refuse not what my heart's concern'd
To ask; speak freely of the king, of me,
Of old Alvarez, of our late allience,
And what has follow'd since; then sum the whok,
And tell me truly, where the account's unequal.

D. San. My lord, you honour with too great 1 The judgment of my unexperienc'd years; Yet for the time I have observ'd on men, I've always found the generous open heart Betray'd, and made the prey of minds below it. Oh ! 'tis the curfe of manly virtue, that Cowards, with cunning, are too firong for heroes! And fince you press me to unfold my thoughts, I grieve to fee your spirit fo defeated, Your just resentments, by vile arts of court, Beguil'd, and melted to refign their terror. Your honest hate, that had for ages stood Unmov'd, and firmer from your foes' defiance, Now fapp'd, and undermin'd by his submission. Alvares knew you were impregnable To force, and chang'd the foldier for the flatefman; While you were yet his foe profes'd, He durft not take thefe honours o'er your head; Had you ftill held him at his diftance due, He would have trembled to have fought this office; When once the king inclin'd to make his peace, I faw too well the fecret on the anvil, And foon foretold the favour that fucceeded ! Alas! this project has been long concerted, Refolv'd in private 'twixt the king and him, Laid out and manag'd here by fecret agents, While he, good man, knew nothing of the honour,

Alva Now And My I Go

The

Oh,

And

From

G

Tha

Oh, Wit

Firft Who

The Alva And

D

Tw

G

I tal

And

D

Nor Or,

Refi

First

Divi

G

D.

To b You Whice Can

Whice Was Ale

The s Such Since Himf Let u And u Gor Subject

The It How Could Ala Who But I Whic

Alto Whofe Iv'n

Gor

If no Your But from his fixeet repose was dragg'd t' accept it.

Oh, it inflames my blood to think this fear should get the ftart of your unguarded spirit,

And proudly vaunt it in the plumes he stole from you!

r it-

e me

graver

ghu

d, id it.

Afide

f at-ring, uncil,

ate?

arm:

ey are,

mes a ife :

it-

on;

it,

you.

Going.

rt my riend:

fon,

p'd

whole,

great 4

[truft

it.

ts,

on.

fman;

ead :

office ;

honout

eace,

1

eroes:

ual.

Ger. Oh, Sanchez, thou hast fir'd a thought, That was before but dawning in my mind? Oh, now afresh it strikes my memory, With what dissembled warmth the artful king First charg'd his temper with the gloom he wore, When I supply'd his late command of general! Then with what fawning flattery to me Alvarez' fear disguis'd his trembling hate, And sooth'd my yielding temper to believe him.

D. San. Not flattery, my lord; though I must Twas praise well-tim'd, and therefore skilful. [grant Gor. Now, on my soul, from him 'twas loathsome daubing!

I take thy friendship, Sanchez, to my heart;
And were not my Ximena rashly promis'd——
D. San. Ximena's charms shight grace a monarch's bed,

Nor dares my humble heart admit the hope; Or, if it durft, some fitter time should shew it; Results more pressing now demand your thought; First ease the pain of your depending doubt, Divide this sawning courtier from the friend.

Gor. Which way shall I receive, or thank thy love? D. San. My lord, you over-rate me now—But see, Alvarez comes—now probe his hollow heart, Now while your thoughts are warm with his deceit, And mark how calmly he'll evade the charge.
My lord, I'm gone.

[Exit.

Gor. I am thy friend for ever.

Alv. My lord, the king is walking forth to fee
The prince, his fon, begin his horfemanship:

If you're inclin'd to fee him, I'll attend you.

Gor. Since duty calls me not, I've no delight
To be an idle gaper on another's bufiness.
You may indeed find pleasure in the office,
Which you've so artfully contriv'd to fit.

Which you've so artfully contriv'd to fit.

Alw. Contriv'd, thy lord! I'm sorry such a thought
Can reach the man whom you've so late embrac'd.

Gor. Men are not always what they seem—This honour,

Which, in another's wrong, you've barter'd for,

Was at the price of those embraces bought.

Alv. Ha! bought! For shame, suppress this poor suspicion!

For if you think, you can't but be convinc'd The naked honour of Alvarez icorns
Such base disguise—Yet pause a moment——
Since our great master, with such kind concern,
Himself has interpos'd to heal our feuds,
Let us not, thankless, rob him of the glory,

And undeferve the grace by new falfe fears.

Gor. Kings are, alas! but men; and form'd like Subject alike to be by men deceiv'd:

[us,
The blushing court from this rash choice will see
How blindly he o'erlooks superior merit.

Could no man fall the place but worn Alvarez?

Alv. Worn more with wounds and victories than
Who flands before him in great actions past? [age.]
But I'm to blame to urge that merit now,
Which will but thook what reasoning may convince

Which will but shock what reasoning may convince, Gor. The fawning slave! Oh, Sanchez, how I thank thee!
Aliv. You have a virtuous daughter, I a son,

Whose foster hearts our mutual hands have rais'd Br'n to the summit of expected joy; If no regard to me, yet let, at least, Your pity of their passions rein your temper.

Gor. Oh, needless care! to nobler objects no That fon, be fure, in vanity, pretends; While his high father's wisdom is preferr'd To guide and govern our great monarch's fon, His proud aspiring heart forgets Ximena. Think not of him, but your superior care; Instruct the royal youth to rule with awe His future subjects, trembling at his frown; Teach him to bind the loyal heart in love, The bold and factious in the chains of fear; Join to these virtues too your warlike deeds, inflame him with the vast fatigues you've borne, But now are past, to shew him by example, And give him in the closet fafe renown; Read him what scorching suns he must endure, What bitter nights muft wake, or fleep in arms, To counter-march the foe, to give th' alarm, And to his own great conduct owe the day; Mark him on charts the order of the battle, And make him from your manuscripts a hero. Alv. Ill-temper'd man! thus to provoke the heart.

Whose tortur'd patience is thy only friend!

Gor. Thou only to thyself canst be a friend:
I tell thee, false Alvarez, thou hast wrong'd me,
Hast basely robb'd me of my merit's right,
And intercepted our young prince's fame.
His youth with me had found the active proof.
The living practice of experienc'd war;
This sword had taught him glory in the field,
At once his great example and his guard;
His unstedg'd wings from me had learnt to soar,
And strike at nations trembling at my name;
This I had done; but thou, with servile arts,
Hast, fawning, crept into our master's breast,
Elbow'd superior merit from his ear,

Alv. Hear me, proud man! for now 1 burn to speak,
Since neither truth can sway, nor temper touch theea.
Thus I retort with sorn thy sland rous rage;
Thou, thou the tutor of a kingdom's heir!
Thou guide the passions of o'er-boiling youth,
That canst not in thy age, yet rule thy own!
For shame! retire, and purge th' imperious heart,
Reduce thy arrogant, self-judging pride,
Correct the meanness of thy groveling soul,
Chase damn'd suspicion from thy manly thoughts,
And learn to treat with honour thy superior. [tor?

And, like a courtier, stole his fon from glory.

Gor. Superior, ha! dar'st thou provoke me, trai-Alw. Unhand me, russian, lest thy hold prove satal. Gor. Take that, audacious dotard! [Strikes bim. Alw. Oh, my blood, Flow forward to my arm, to chain this tyger! If thou art brave, now bear thee like a man, And quit my honour of this vile difgrace.

[They fight, Alvarez is difarm'd.

Oh, feeble life, I have too long endur'd thee!

Ger. Thy fword is mine! take back the inglorious trophy,

Which would difgrace thy victor's thigh to wear.

Now forward to thy charge, read to the prince

This martial lecture of thy fam'd exploits;

And from this wholesome chastisement, learn thou.

To tempt the patience of offended honour! [Exis-

Aiv. Oh, rage! Oh wild despair! Oh, helplesa Wert thou but lent me to survive my honour? [age! Am I with martial toils worn grey, and see At last one hour's blight lay waste my laurels? Is this sam'd arm to me alone desenceles? Has it so often prop'd this empire's glory, Fenc'd, like a rampart, the Castilian throne, To me alone disgraceful, to it's master useles? Oh, sharp remembrance of departed glory!

Oh, fatal dignity, too dearly purchas'd!
Now, haughty Gormaz, now guide thou my prince;
Infulted honour is unfit t' approach him.
And thou, once glorious weapon, fare thee well,
Old fervant, worthy of an abler mafter,
Leave now for ever his abandon'd fide,
And, to revenge him, grace fome nobler arm.
My fon!

Enter Carlos.

Oh, Carlos! canft thou bear dishonour?

Car. What villain dares occasion, Sir, the question?

Give me his name; the proof shall answer him.

Alv. Oh, just reproach! Oh, prompt resentful

My blood rekindles at thy manly stame, [fire!

And glads my labouring heart with youth's return.

Up, up, my fon!—I cannot speak my shame—

Revenge, revenge me!

Car. Oh, my rage !- Of what?.

Alw. Of an indignity so vile, my heart
Redoubles all it's torture to repeat it.

A blow! a blow, my boy!

Car. Distraction! fury!

Alv. In vain, alas! this feeble arm affail'd,
With mortal vengeance, the aggressor's heart:
He dally'd with my age, o'erborn, insulted,
Therefore to thy young arm, for sure revenge,
My soul's diffress commits my sword and cause:
Pursue him, Carlos, to the world's last bounds,
And from his heart tear back our bleeding honour.
Nay, to enstame thee more, thous't find his brow
Cover'd with laurete, and far-sam'd his prowess:
Oh, I've seen him, dreadful in the field,
Cut thro' whole squadrons his destructive way,
And snatch the gore-dy'd standard from the foe!

Car. Oh, rack not with his same my tortur'd heart,

That burns to know him, and eclipfe his glory!
Alv. Tho' I foresce, 'twill firike thy soul to hear it,
Yet fince our gasping honour calls for thy Relief—Oh, Carlos!—'tis Ximena's father—

Car. Ha!

Alvo. Pause not for a reply—I know thy love, I know the tender obligations of thy heart, And even lend a figh to thy diftress. I grant Ximena dearer than thy life;
But wounded honour must furmount them both. I need not urge thee more; thou know's my wrong; 'Tis in thy heart, and in thy hand the vengeance; Blood only is the balm for grief like mine, Which, 'till obtain'd, I will in darkness mourn, Nor lift my eyes to light, till thy return. But haste, o'ertake this blaster of my name, Fly swift to vengeance, and bring back my fame!

Car. Relentless Heav'n! is all thy thunder gone? Not one bolt left to finish my despair? Lie ftill, my heart, and close this deadly wound; Stir not to thought, for motion is thy ruin. But fee, the frighted poor Ximena comes, And with her tremblings strikes thee cold as death. My helpless father too, o'erwhelm'd with shame, Begs his dismission to his grave with honour. Ximena weeps; heart-pierc'd Alvarez groans Rage lifts my fword, and love arrefts my arm!
Oh, double torture of diffracting woe!
Is there no mean betwixt these sharp extremes? Must honour perish, if I spare my love? Oh, ignominious pity! shameful softness! Muft I, to right Alvarez, kill Ximena? Oh, cruel vengeance! Oh, heart-wounding hon-Shall I forfake her in her foul's extremes, . [our! Deprefs the virtue of her filial tears, And bury in a tomb our nuptial joy?

Shall that just honour that subdu'd her heart, Now build it's fame relenties on her forrows? Instruct me, Heav'n, that gav'st me this distress. To chuse, and bear me worthy of my being! Oh, Love, forgive me, if my hurry'd soul Should act with error in this storm of fortune; For Heav'n can tell what pangs I feel to save thee! But hark! the shrieks of drowning honour call! 'Tis sinking, gasping, while I stand in pause; Plunge in, my heart, and save it from the billow, It will be so—the blow's too sharp a pain, And vengeance has at least this just excuse, Thate'en Xismena bloshes while I bear it: Her generous heart, that was by honour won, Must, when that honour's stain'd, abjure my love. Oh, peace of mind, farewel! Revenge, I come, And raise thy altar on a mournful tomb!

A C T III.

Enter Garcia and Gormaz.

Gor. THE king is master of his will and me:
But be it as it may what's done's irrevocable:

Gar. My lord, you ill receive this mark of favour,
And while thus obstinate, inflame your fault.
When sovereign power descends to ask of subjects
The due submission which it's will may force,
Your danger's greater from such slighted mildness,
Than should you disobey it's full commands.

Gor. The consequence, perhaps, may prove it so, Gar. Have you no fear of what his frown may do? Gor. Has he no fear of what my wrongs may do? Men of my rank are not in hours undone; When I am crush'd, I fall with vengeance round me.

Gar. The rash indignity you've done Alvarez, Without some proof of wrong, bears no excuse, Gor. I am myself the judge of what I feel; I feel him false and feeling must resent

I feel him false, and, feeling, must resent.

Gar. Shall it be deem'd a falshood to accept
A dignity by royal hands conferred?

Gor. He should have wav'dit; first consulted me, He might have held me still his friend fincere, Have shar'd my fortunes, as a friend intreating; But basely thus to out me of my right, By treacherous acts to do me private wrong, Is what I never can forgive, and have resented.

Gar. But in this violence you offend the king,
The fanction of whose choice claim'd more regard.
Gor. Why am I fretted with these chains of honLess free than others in my just resentments; [our,
Who, unprovok'd myself, do no man wrong,

But injur'd, am as ftorms implacable!

Gar. My lord, this stubborn temper will undoyou.

Gor. Then, Sir, Alvares will be fatisfy'd.

Gar. Be yet persuaded, and compose this broil.
Gor. My resolution's fix'd; let's wave the subject.
Gar. Will you refuse all terms of reparation?

Gor. All, all, that are not from my honour due! Gar. Dare you not truft that honour with the king?

Gor. My life's my king's; my honour is my own.

Gar. What's then, in thort, your answer? Fat

Expects it on my first return.

[the king

Gor. 'Tis this,

That I dare die, but cannot bow to fame.

Gar. My lord, I take my leave.
Gor. Don Garcia's fervant. [Exit Garcia
Who fears not death, smiles at the frowns of power.
Enter Carlos.

Car. My lord, your leave to talk with your

I have Thy I felt We'r So de With Then

Ca

And I

Have

1 di

An

0

C

She

We

Ma

Not

Sinc

Not

Ibe

Let

Oh,

Of i

Oh,

Stop

And

G

Wil

And

Subu

Gor Car That For ft Or fty Gor Car Am I

Had y Your And t Gor Or thi Thou I will

Whic

His fa And ju Car. The p Have To fw

And he Oh, girland ri

Her he I cannot Thus r And m

Gor.

Gor. Be free.

reft,

€;

hee!

all!

llows,

love,

me,

-4

e: s irre-

rour,

ects

nefs,

it fo.

y do !

y dot

d me.

ez,

ile.

i

t

d me

8i

d.

ng,

gard. hon-

[out, oyou.

roil.

bject.

due!

the .

ows.

Fot

king

ercia

ower.

I did expect you on this late occasion. Car. I'm glad to find you do my honour right; And hope you'll not refuse it wrong'd Alvarez.

Gor. He had a sword to right himself.
Cat. That sword is here.
Gor. Tis well; the place—and let our time be
Car. One moment's respite, for Ximena's sake; She has not wrong'd me, and my heart would spare We both, without a stain to either's honour, [her: May pity her diffress, and pause to save her: Nor need I blufh that I fufpend my caufe, Since with it's vengeance her fure woes are blended.

Not for myfelf, but for her tender fake, I bend me to the earth, and beg for mercy. Let not her virtues fuffer for her love ; Oh, lay not on her innocence the grief Of a mourn'd father's, or a lover's blood! Oh, spare her sighs, prevent her streaming tears; Stop this effusion of my bleeding honour,

And heal, if possible, it's wounds with peace! Gor. What you have offer'd for Ximena's fake, Will, in her gratitude, be full repaid; And for the peace you ask, that's yours to give. Submission 'tis in vain to hope; for know, I have this hour refus'd it to the king Thy father's arts betray'd my friendship's faith ; l felt the wrong, and, as I ought, reveng'd it. We're now on equal terms: but if his cause So deep is in thy heart, that thou refolv'ft, With fruitless vengeance, to provoke my rage,

Then thou, not I, art author of thy ruin. Car. Support me now, Ximena, guard my heart, And bar this preffing provocation's entrance. [Afide. Have I, my lord, in person wrong'd you?

Gor. No. Car. Why then thefe fatal cruelties to me, That I must lose, or wrong Ximena's love? For the must scorn me, should I bear my shame; Or fly me, tho' my honour should revenge it.

Gor. Place that to thy misfortune, not to me. Car. Not to you! Am I not forc'd by wrongs I blush to name, To profecute this fatal reparation, Which, had you temper, or a feeling here; Had you the spirit to confess your error, Your heart's confusion had subdu'd Alvarez, And thrown you at his injur'd feet for pardon!

Gor. If thou com'A here to talk me from my fenfe, Or think'ft with words t' extenuace his guilt, Thou offer'ft to the winds thy forceless plea. will not bear the mention of his truth; His falshoods here, 'tis rooted in my heart, And justifies a worse revenge than I have taken.

Car. Oh, pacience, Heav'n! Oh, tortur'd rage! Not speak!

The pious pangs of my torn foul insulted! Have I for this bow'd down my humble knee, To fwell thy triumph o'er my father's wrongs, And hear him tainted with a traitor's practice? Oh, give me back that vile submissive shame, That I may meet thee with retorted fcorn, And right my honour with untainted vengeance! -with-hold it, take it to acquit my love: That facrifice was to Ximena due; Her helpless sufferings claim'd that pang : and fince cannot bring dishonour to her arms Thus my rack'd heart pours forth it's last adieus, And makes libation of it's bleeding peace: Farewel, dear injur'd foftness-Follow me.

Ger.Lead on-yet hold-fhould we together forth, I: may create suspicion, and prevent us. Propose the place ; I'll take forme different circle.

Car. Behind the ramparts near the Western Gate. Gor. Expect me on the inftant. Car. Poor Ximena!

Exit. Gor. Deep as refentment lodges in my heart, It feels some pity there for Carlos' passion-It shall be fo--his brave resentment's just;

Writes in tablets. This legacy And hard his fate both ways-Shall right my honour and my enemy. Exit.

Enter Belzara and Ximena. Bel. Look up, Ximena, and suppress thy fears; What tho' a transient cloud o'ercast thy joy, Shall we conclude from thence a wreck must follow?

Xim. Can I refift the fears that reason forms ? Have I not cause to tremble in the storm, While horror, ruin, and despair's in view ? Can I support the good Alvarez' shame, Whose generous heart took pity on our love, And not let fall a grateful tear to mourn it? Can I behold fierce Carlos, ftung with his difgrace, Breaking like fire from thefe weak-holding arms, And not fink down with terror at his rage i Must I not tremble for the blood may follow? If by his arm my haples father falls, Am I not forc'd with rigour to revenge him? If Carlos by my father's fword should bleed, Am I not bound with double grief to mourn him? One gave me life, shall I not revere him ? The other is my life, can I furvive him?

Bel. Her griefs have something of such mournful That, tho' not equal to my own, I feel them. [Afide. Xim. Carlos, you fee too, fhuns my fight; no news,

No tidings yet arrive, tho' I have fent My swiftest fears a thousand ways to find him. Who can support these terrors of suspense?

Bel. Be not thus torn with wild uncertain fears; Carlos may yet arrive, and fave your peace: He is too much a lover to refift The tender pleadings of Ximena's forrow; One word, one figh from you arrests his arm, And makes the tempest of his rage subside.

Xim. And fay that I could conquer him, with And terrors could fubdue his piteous heart [tears, To yield his honour and it's cause to love, What will the world not fay of his compliance? Can I be happy in his fame's difgrace? Can love subsist on shame, that sprung from honour? Shall I reduce him to fuch hard contempt, And raife on infamy our nuptial joy? Ah, no! no means are left for my relief : Let him refift, or yield to my diftress, Or shame or forrow's fure to meet me!

Bel. Ximena has, I fee, a foul refin'd, Too great, too just, too noble to be happy: True virtue must despair from this vile world To crown it's days with unallay'd reward. But fee, your fervant is return'd-Good news, Kind Heav'n!

Enter a Page.

Xim. Speak quickly; haft thou feen Don Carlos? Page. Madam, where your commands directed me, I've made the strictest fearch in vain to find him. Xim. Now, now, Belzara, where's that hope thou gay'ft me ? Bel. Nor haft thou gain'd no knowledge of his fleps? Has no one feen him pals, or heard of him?

Page. As I return'd, the centinel that guards The gate inform'd me, that he faw him scarce Ten minutes hence pafs in diforder'd hafte From out this very house alone.

Bel. Alone!

Page. Alone; and after foon my lord, wrapp'd in His closk, without a fervant, follow'd him, Xim. Oh, Heav'n!

Bel. No servant, saids thou?

Page. None; and as

My lord came forth, the soldier standing to

His arms, he sign'd forbiddance, and reply'd,

Be sure you saw me not.'

Be fure you faw me not;'

Xim Then ruin's fure;

They are engag'd, and fatal blood must follow. Excuse, my dear, this hurry of my fate;

One moment loft, may prove an age too late. [Exit. Bel. Howe'er my own afflictions preis my heart, I bear a part in poor Ximena's grief; Tho' e'en the worft that can befal her hopes, May better be endur'd than what I feel. Oh, nothing can deftroy her lover's truth! Carlos may prove unhappy, not inconfant; Whate'er difafters may obstruct her jov, The comfort of his truth is fure to find her. That thought e'en pains of parting may remove, Or fill up all the space of absence with delight. But I, alas! am left to my despair alone, Confin'd to figh in folitude my woes, Or hide with anguish what I blush to bear. In vain the woman's pide refents my wrongs, Unconquer'd love maintains his empire fill, And with new force infults my heart's refiftance. Enter Alonzo baffily.

Alon. Your pardon, Madam—Have you feen Lord

I come to warn him that he ftir not hence; The guards are order'd to attend his door.

Bel. Alas, they are too late! Carlos and he Are both gone fort!, 'tis fear'd, with fatal purpofe; And poor Ximena, drown'd in tears, has follow'd them.

Alon. Then 'tis indeed, too late-I wish my friend,

The rash Don Sanchez, had not blown this fire. Be not concern'd, Madam; I know your griefs, And, as a friend, have labour'd to prevent them. You have not told Ximena of his falshood?

Bel. Alas, I durst not! knowing that her friend-Would for my sake so coldly treat his vows, [ship That 'twould but more provoke him to insult me.

Alon. You judge him right; patience will yet recal him;

'Tis not his love, but pride, pursues Ximena; A youthful heat, that with the toil will tire. Be comforted; I'll still observe his steps, And when I find him staggering, catch him back To love, and warm him with his vows of honour. But duty calls me to the king—Shall I Attend you, Madam?

Bel. Sir, I thank your care.

My near concern for poor Ximena's fate.

Keeps me impatient here, till her return. [Excunt.

Enter King, Garcia, Don Sanchez, and Attendants.

King, Garcia, Don Sanchez, and Attendants.

King. Since mild entreaties fail, our power shall force him.

Could he suppose his insult to our person offer'd, His outrage done within our palace walls, Deferv'd the lenity we've deign'd to shew him? Is yet Alonzo with our orders gone?

Car. He is, my lord, but not return'd. D. San. Dread Sir,

For what the count has offer'd to Alvarez I dare not plead excuse; but as his friend, Would beg your royal leave to mitigate His seeming disobedience to your pleasure. Restraint, however just, oppos'd against The tide of passion, makes the current siercer, Which of itself in time had ebb'd to reason; Your will surpriz'd him in his heart's emotion,

Ere thought had leifure to compose his mind; Great souls are jealous of their honour's shame, And bend reluctant to injoin'd submission: Had your commands oblig'd him to repair Alvarez' wrongs with hazards in your service, Were it to face the double-number'd fee, To pass the rapid stream thro' showers of fire, To force the trenchment, or to storm the breath, I'll answer he'd embrace with joy the charge, And march intrepid in commands of honour.

Ca

Sti

0

T

W

Al

M

ls

Ha

A

TI

So

Co

Ha

Th

Fal

Sh

An

Al

Ye

W

Shi

Oh

W

An

Di

Ho

An

He

An

Xi

No

Ca

Pe

An

Bu

0

He

King. We doubt not of his daring in the field; But he mistakes, if he concludes from thence, That to perfift in wrong is height of spirit, Or to have acted wrong is always base: Perfection's not the attribute of man, Nor therefore can a fault confes'd degrade him; The lowest minds have spirit to offend, But few can reach the courage to confess it. Submitting to our will, the count had loft No fame, nor can we parden his refusal. [friend; What you have said, Don Sanchez, speaks the What we refolve, 'tis fit should speak the king; We both have faid enough-The publick now Requires our thought. We are inform'd ten fail Of warlike veffels, mann'd with our old foes The Moors, were late discover'd off our coaft, And fleering to the river's mouth their course.

Gar. The lives, Sir, they have loft in like attempts
Must make them cautious to repeat the danger:
This is no time to fear them.

King. Nor contemn;
Too full fecurity has oft been fatal.
Confider with what eafe the flood, at night,
May bring them down t' infult our capital.
Let at the port, and on the walls our guards.
Be doubled; till the morn, that force may ferve.
Gormaz has tim'd it ill to be in fault,
When his immediate presence is requir'd.

Gar. My liege, Alonzo is return'd.
Enter Alonzo.

King. 'Tis wellHave you obey'd us? Is the count confin'd?

Alon. Your orders, Sir, arriv'd unhappily
Too late; the count, with Carlos, was before

Gone forth, to end their fatal difference : As I came back, I met the gathering crowd In fright, and hurrying to the western gate, To fee, as they reported, in the field, The body of fome murder'd nobleman. Struck with my fears, I hafted to the place, Where, to my fenfe's horror, when arriv'd, I found them true, and Gormaz just expir'd; While fair Ximena, to adorn the woe, Bath'd his pale breathless body with her tears, Calling with cries for juffice on his head, Whose rueful hand had done the barbarous deed, The pitying crowd took part in her diffrefs, And join'd her moving plaints for due revenge; While some, in kinder feeling of her griefs, Remov'd the mournful object from her eyes, And to the neighbouring convent bore the body, Which, when committed to the Abbot's care, I left the preffing throng to tell the news.

King. Kimena's griefs are follow'd with our own;
For tho' in some degree the haughty count
Drew on himself the son's too just revenge,
We cannot lose, without a deep concern,
So true a subject, and so brave a soldier:
However pity may for Carlos plead,
Death ends his failings, and demands our grief.

Alon. Sir, here, in the tablets of th' unhaps!

in his own hand thefe written lines were found.

King. [Reading.] " Alvarez wrong'd me in my | Ob, piercing, piercing must the torture be, mafter's favour :

Carlos is brave, and has deferv'd Ximena."

ne,

each,

eld;

m;

riend;

ks the

ng;

fail

empts r:

rve.

ed.

ė;

dv,

own;

happy

٠,

Strange, generous fpirit! now we pity thee.

Alod. Behold, Sir, where the loft Ximena comes, O'erwhelm'd with forrow, to demand your justice !

Enter Ximena.

Xim. Oh, facred Sir, forgive my grief's intru-Behold a helples orphan at your feet, [fion! Who for a father's blood implores your justice! Enter Alvarez, baftily.

Alv. Oh, turn, dread, royal mafter, turn your

See on the earth your faithful foldier proftrate, Whole honour's just revenge entreats your mercy! Xim. Oh, godlike monarch, hear my louder cries Aly. Oh, be not to the old and helplefs deaf! Xim. Revenge yourfelf, your violated laws. Alv. Support not violence in rude aggressors Xim. Be greatly good, and do the injur'd justice.

Alv. Be greater fill, and thew the valiant mercy. Xim. Oh, Sir, your crown's support and guard is gone !

The impious Carlos' fword has kill'd my father-Alv. And, like a pious fon, aveng'd his own. King. Rife, fair Ximena, and Alvarez rife! With equal forrow we receive your plaints; Both shall be heard apart-Proceed, Kimena Alvarez, in your place you fpeak : be patient. Xim. What can I fay? But miseries like mine May plead with plainest truths their piteous cause. Is he not dead ? Is not my father kill'd? Have not these eyes beheld his ghastly wound, And mix'd with fruitless tears his streaming blood? That blood which in his royal master's cause So oft has fprung him through your foes victorious; That blood, which all the raging swords of war Could never reach, a young prefumptuous arm Has dar'd within your view to facrifice ! Thefe eyes beheld it ftream-Excuse my grief; My tears will better than my words explain me! King. Take heart, Kimena; we're inclin'd to hear thee. Xim. Oh, shall a life fo faithful to the king, Fall unreveng'd, and ftain his glory? Shall merit fo important to the flate Be left expos'd to facrilegious rage, And fall the facrifice of private passion? Alvarez fays, his honour was infulted; Yet, be it fo, was there no king to right it? Who better could protect it than the donor? Shall Carlos wrest the sceptre from your hand, And point the fword of justice whom to punish? Oh, if fuch outrage may escape with pardon, Whose life's secure from his self-judging rage? Oh, where's protection, if Ximena's tears, And tender passion could not save her father !

King. Alvarez, answer her. Divided, torn, diftracted with it's griefs, How can I plead poor Carlos' cause, when I Am touch'd with pity of Ximena's woe? Her suffering piety has caught my soul, And only leaves me forrow to defend me : Ximena has a grief I cannot difallow, Nor dare I hope for pardon, but your pity : Carlos e'en yet may merit fome compassion; Perhaps I'm partial to his piety, And fee his deeds with a fond father's eye; But that I still must leave to royal mercy. Oh, Sir, imagine what the brave endure, When the chafte front of honour is infulted, Her fame abus'd, and ravish'd by a blow!

If foft Ximena wanted pow'r t' appeafe it! Pardon this weakness of o'erflowing nature; I cannot fee fuch filial virtue perifh, And not let fall a tear to mourn it's hardship!

Xim. Oh, my divided heart! Oh, poor Alvarez! Afide.

King. Compose thy griefs, my good old friend; we feel them. Alv. If Gormaz' blood must be with blood re-veng'd, Oh, do not, facred Sir, misplace your justice! Mine was the guilt, and be on me the vengeance: Carlos but acted what my fufferings prompted; The fatal sword was not his own, but mine; I gave it with my wrongs into his hand, Which had been innocent had mine been able. On me your vengeance will be just and mild; My days, alas! are drawing to their end, But Carlos spar's, may yet live long to serve you. Preserve my son, and I embrace my fate; Since he has fav'd my honour from the grave,

Oh, lay me gently there to rest for ever! King. Your mutual plaints require our tend'reft thought:

Our council shall be summon'd to affist us-Look up, my fair, and calm thy forrows; Thy king is now thy father, and will right thee. Alvarez on his word has liberty; Be Carlos found to answer to his charge. -Sanchez, wait you Ximena to her reft, Whom on the morrow's noon we full will answer. Hard is the talk of justice, where distress Excites our mercy, yet demands redrefs.

ACT

SCENE, Ximena's Apartment. Belgara alone.

QURE fome ill-boding planet muft prefide, Malignant to the peace of tender lovers! Undone Ximena! Oh, relentless honour, That first subdu'd thy generous heart, then rais'd Thy lover's fatal arm to pierce it through Thy father's life, and make thy virtue wretched ! The hapless Carlos too is loft for ever! Condemn'd to fly an exile from her fight In whom he only lives !- Oh, Heav'n! he's here! His miseries have made him desperate.

Enter Carlos. Carlos, what wild diftraction has posses'd thee, That thus thou feek'ft thy fafety in thy ruin? Is this a place to hide thy wretched head, Where justice and Ximena's sure to find thee?

Car. I would not hide me from Ximena's fight; Banish'd from her, I every moment die. Since I must perish, let her frowns destroy me; Her anger's sharper than the sword of justice.

Bel. Alas, I pity thee! but would not have Thee tempt the first emotions of her heart, While duty and resentment yet transport her: I wait each moment her return from court, Which now, be fure, will be with friends attended. O fly ! for pity's fake, regard her fame; Should you be feen, what must the world conclude? Would you increase her miseries, to have Malicious tongues report her love conceal'd Beneath the roof, her father's murderer? But fee, the comes! O, hide thee but a moment! Kill not her honour too, let that persuade thee. [East Carlos. Don Sanchez here! O, Heavens! how I tremble. [Retires.

Enter Don Sanchez and Ximena. D. Son. This noble conqueft, Madam, of your To after-ages must record your fame. Just is your grief, and your resentment great, And great the victim that should fall before it;

But words are empty fuccours to diftrefs : Therefore command my actions to relieve you. Would you have fure revenge, employ this fword, My fortune, and my life is yours to right you; Accept my fervice, and you'll over-pay it.

Bel. O faithless, barbarous man! but I'll divert

Thy cruel aim, and use my power for Carlos.

Xim. O, miserable me!

Bel. Take comfort, Madam.

D. San. Belzara here! then I have loft th'occasion; Yat I may urge enough to give her pain : Commanding me, you make your vengeance sure. Xim. That were t' offend the king, to whom I have

Appeal'd, and whence I now must only wait it. D. San. Revenge from justice, Madam, moves

That oft the watchful criminal escapes it. Appeal to your refentment, you fecure it. Carlos, you found, would truft no other power, And 'tis but just you quit him as he wrong'd you. Bel. Alas! Don Sanchez, Madam, feels not love, He little thinks how Carlos fills your heart; What shining glory in his crime appears; What pangs it cost him to take part with honour; That you must hate the hand that could destroy Sanchez, to fhew the real friend, would ufe [him. His fecret int'reft with the king to spare him, For the' you're bound in duty to pursue him, Yet love, alas! would with a conscious joy, Applaud the power that could, unbid, preferve him. Xim. O, kind Belzara! how thou feel'ft my fuf-ferings Yet I muft think, Don Sanchez means me well.

D. San. Confusion! how her subtle tongue has foil'd me !-Madam, some other time I'll beg your leave To wait your service, and approve my friendship.

Xim. Oh, every friend, but Carlos, is at hand To help me! Grief, Sir, is unfit to thank you. D. San. Oh! if fuch beauties 'midft her forrows fhine, What darting charms must point her smiling eyes.

Xim. At length I'm free, at liberty to think, And give my miseries a loose of sorrow. O, Belzara! Carlos has kill'd my father! Weep, weep, my eyes, pour down your baleful fhow'rs:

He that in grief should be my heart's support, Has wrought my forrows, and must fall their vic-

When Carlos is destroy'd, what comfort's left me? Spite of my wrongs he still inhabits here: O, ftill his fatal virtues plead his cause ; His filial honour charms my woman's heart, And there, e'en yet, he combats with my father.

Bel. Reftrain these headstrong fallies of your heart, And try with flumbers to compose your spirits.

Xim. O! where's repose for milery like mine? How grievous, Heaven! how bitter is my portion! O, shall a parent's blood cry unreveng'd? Shall impious love fuborn my heart to pay His afhes but approfitable tears, And bury in my shame the great regards of duty?

Bel. Alas ! that duty is discharg'd; you have Appeal'd to justice, and should wait it's course. Nor are you bound with rigour to enforce it; His hard misfortunes may deferve compaffion.

Xim. O! that they do deferve, it is my grief; Could I withdraw my pity from his cause, Were falshood, pride, or insolence his crime, My just revenge, without a pang, should reach him, But as he is supported with excuse, Defended by the cries of bleeding honour, Whose cruel laws none but the great obey; My hopeless heart is tortur'd with extremes, It mourns in vengeance, and at mercy hudders! Bel. O, what will be at last the dire resolve Of your afflicted foul?

Xim. There is but one Can end my forrows, and preferve my fame; The fole refource my miferies can have Is to purfue, deftroy; then meet him in the grave.

Carlos meets ber.

Amazement! horror! have my eyes their fense? Or do my raving griefs create this phantom? Support me! help me! hide me from the vision! For 'tis not Carlos come to brave my forrows! [Carlos kneels.

Bel. O turn your eye in pity of his griefs, Refign'd, and proftrate at your feet for mercy. Xim. What will my woes do with me?

Bel. Now! Now, conquering love, shoot all thy darts to fare Now fnatch the palm from cruel honour's brow; Maintain thy empire, and relieve the wretched: O, hang upon his tongue thy thrilling charms, To hold her heart, and kill the hopes of Sancher!

Car. O, pierce not thus with thy offended eyes, The wretched heart that of itself is breaking!

Xim. Can I be wounded, and not fhrink with Can I support with temper, him that fied [pain? My father's blood triumphant in my ruin? Carlos! Carlos! was thy heart of ftone? Was nothing due to poor Ximena's peace? Ol.'twas not thus I felt new pains for thee, When at my feet, thy fighs of love were pity'd, And all hereditary hate forgotten! Tho' bound in filial honour, to infult Thy flame; I broke through all to crown thy vows, And bore the censure of my race to save thee; And I am thus requited ? Left forlorn! The tender paffion of my heart despis'd! Could not my terrors move one spark of mercy? No mild abatement of thy ftern revenge, T' excuse thy crime, or justify my love ! Car. O, hear me but a moment.

Xim. O, my heart!

Car. One mournful word!

Xim. Ah! leave me to despair! Car. One dying last adieu, then wreak thy ven-Behold the fword that has undone thee.

Xim. Ah! flain'd with my father's blood! 0, rueful objett! Car. O, Ximena! Xim. Take hence that horrid fleel,

That, while I bear thy fight, arraigns my virtue. Car. Endure it rather to support resentment, T' inflame thy vengeance, and to pierce thy victim: I am more wretched, than thy rage can wish me! Xim. O, cruel Carlos! in one day thou had kill'd

The father with thy fword, the daughter with Thy fight -- O, yet remove that fatal object; I cannot bear the glare of it's reproach; If thou would'A have me hear thee, hide the caus

A Ar Re T 11 No Bu

T

H

W

0

W

Bu

W

0

Be

Bu

No W Be Re Pre

Bu

My

01

M Th W Cal An Ica Th My

Cor An Ye But The Let Th Be

To Wh My An Acc No,

1 w But Wh Un And Can

Can X Nay Tha Art Yet

Giv Befo And

Ca

That wounds reflection to our mutual ruin. Car. Thus I obey--but how fhall I proceed ? What words can help me to deferve thy hearing? How can I plead my wounded honour's caufe, Where injur'd love and duty are my judges? Or how thall I repent me of a crime, Which, uncommitted, had deferv'd thy fcorn? Yet think not, O! I conjure thee, think not, But that I bore a thousand racks of love, While my conflicting honour press'd for vengeance. O I endur'd, fubmitted e'en to fhame, Begg'd, as for life, for peaceful reparation! But all in vain; like water sprinkled on A fire, those drops out made him burn the more, And only added to thy father's fierceness. Reduc'd, at laft, to these extremes of torture, That I must be, or infamous, or wretched, I fav'd my honour, and refign'd to ruin. Nor think, Ximena, honour had prevail'd, But that thy nobler foul oppos'd thy charms, And told my heart, none but the brave deferv'd thee, Now having thus discharg'd my honour's debt, And wash'd my injur'd father's stains away, What yet remains of life, is due to love. Behold the wretch, whose honour's fatal fame Is founded on the ruin of thy peace : Receive the victim, which thy griefs demand, ef;

him,

rs!

grave.

Going.

fe ?

on!

kneels.

him;

o fare

; wo

ed : s, ichez!

Exit.

eyes,

with pain?

d,

vows,

.

y ?

nce !

ven-

! 0, jett!

gê.

t, im:

haft

ne!

h

MS

.

Prepar'd to bleed, and bending to the blow!

Xim. O, Carlos, I must take thee at thy word,
But must with equal justice too discharge
My sies of love, as fatal bonds of duty.
O think not, tho' enforc'd to these extremes,
My heart is yet insensible to thee!
O! I must thank thee for thy painful pause;
The generous shame thy tortur'd honour bore,
When at my father's feet my suff'rings threw thee.
Can I present thee in that dear confusion,
And not with grateful signs of pity mourn thee?
I can lament thee, but I dare not pardon;
Thy duty done, reminds me of my own;
My filial piety, like thine distress'd,
Compels me to be miserably just,
And asks my love a victim to my fame:
Yet think not duty could o'er love prevail,
But that thy nobler soul assures my heart,
Thou wouldst despite the passion that could save thee.

Thou wouldft despife the passion that could save thee. Car. Since I must die, let that kind hand destroy Letnot the wretch once honour'd with thy love, sme. Thy Carlos, once thought worthy of thy arms, Be dragg'd a publick spectacle to justice:
To draw the irksome pity of a crowd,
Who may with vulgar reason call thee cruel.
My death from thee will elevate thy vengeance,
And shew, like mine, thy duty scorn'd affistance.

Xim. Shall I then take affiftance? and from thee?
Accept that vengeance from thy heart's despair?
No, Carlos, no!
I will not judge, like thee, my private wrongs,
But to the course of justice trust my duty,
Which shall, in ev'ry part, untainted flow;
Unmix'd with gain'd advantage o'er thy love,
And from it's own pure fountain raise my glory.

Car. O, can my death with shame advance that Can I do more than perish, to appease thee? [glory? Can my misfortunes too have reach'd thy hate?

Xim. Can hate have part in interviews like this? Nay, can I give thee greater proof of love, Than that I trust my vengeance with thy honour? Art not thou now within my power to seize? Yet I'll release thee, Carlos, on thy word, Give me thy word, that on the morrow noon, Before the king in person thou wilt answer, And take the shelter of the night to leave me. Car. O, thou hast found the way to six my ruin!

It must be so, thou shalt have ample vengeauce,
Pursu'd by thee, my life's not worth the saving;
But then that satal honour, my engagement,
That at the hour propos'd, I'll meet my face—
But must we part, Ximena, like sworn soes?
Has love no sense of all it's perish'd hopes?
Dismiss my miseries at least with pity:
May I not breathe upon this injur'd bosom
One parting sigh to ease my wounded soul,
And loose the anguish of a broken heart! [morrow.

Xim. Support me, Heaven—we meet again to-Car. To-morrow we must meet like enemies, Thy piercing eyes, relentless in revenge, And all the softness of thy heart forgotten; This only moment is our life of love. O take not from this little interval, The poor expiring comfort that is left me.

My heart's confounded with thy fort compassion,
And doats upon the virtue that destroys me.

Xim. O! I shall have the start of thee in woe;
Thou canst but fall for her thou lov'st; but what
Mus she endure that loves thee—and destroys thee?
Yet, Carlos, take this comfort in thy fate,
That if the hand of justice should o ertake thee,
Thy mournful urn shall hold Ximena's asses.

Car. O, miracle of love!

Xim. O, mortal forrow!

But hafte, O leave me while my heart's refolv'd;

Fly, fly me, Carios! left thou taint my fame;

Left in this ebbing rigour of my foul,

I tell thee, tho' I profecute thy fate,

My secret wish is, that my cause may fail me.

Car. O spirit of compassion! O Ximena!

What pangs and ruin have our parents cost us?

Farewel, thou treasure of my soul! O stay!

Take not at once my short-liv'd joys away,

While thus I fix me on thy mournful eyes,

Let my distresses to extremes arise,

Thy victim's now secure; for thus to part,

I sate thy vengeance with a broken heart. [Execut.

Enter Alvarez, with Noblemen, Officers, and others.

1st Nob. These sew, my lord, are on my part en-gag'd;

In half an hour Don Henrique de Las Torres,
With fixty more, will wait upon your cause,
Resolv'd and ready, all like us, to right you:
Since the just quarrel of your house must live,
Since the brave blood of Carlos is pursu'd,
The race of Gormaz shall attend his asses.

Alv. My lord, this mark of your exalted honour Will bind me ever grateful to your friendship; Tho' I fill hope the mercy of the king Will spare the criminal, whose guilt is honour. The service I have done the state has found A bounteous mafter always to reward it; Nor am I yet fo wedded to my reft, But that I still can, on occasion, break it. The Moors are anchored now within the river, And, as I'm told, near landing to infult us-Wherefore, I would intreat you at this time, To wave my private danger for the publick, Since chance has form'd us to fo brave a body, Let us not part inactive to our honour; Let's feize this glad occasion of th' alarm, Let's chafe thefe robbers in our king's defence, And bravely merit, not demand his mercy.

1st Nob. Alvarez may command us, who is fliil Himfelf, and owns no cause unmix'd with honour.

Enter a Servant, who whispers Alvarez.

Alv. How, now! the news.

Just enter'd, and alone!

O Heav'n, my pray'rs are heard! my noble silends.

Something to our present purpose has occur'a;

Let me intreat you, forward to the garden,
Where you will find a treble number of
Our forces affembl'd on the like occasion;
Myself will in a moment bring you news,
That will confirm and animate our hopes. [Ex. Nob.
Enter Carlos.

My Carlos ! O, do I live once more t' embrace thee, Prop of my sge, and guardian of my fame! Nor think, my champion, that my joy's thus wild, For that thou only haft reveng'd my honour, Tho' that's a thought might bless me in the grave No, no, my fon, for thee am I transported; Alas! I am too fenfible what pains Thy heart must feel from anguish of thy love; And had I not new hopes that will support thee, Some present prospect of thy pain's relief, My sense of thy afflictions would destroy me. Car. What means this kind compassion of mygriefs? Is there on earth a cure for woes like mine? O, Sir, you are fo tenderly a father, So good, I can't repent me of my duty : Be not, however, jealous of my fame, If yet I mix your transports with a figh, For ruin'd love, and for the loft Ximena : For fince I drag, with my despair my chain, Her fated vengeance only can relieve me!

Ale. No more depress thy spirits with despair, While glory and thy country's cause should wake it; The Moors, not yet expected, are artiv'd, The tide and filent darkness of the night Lands, in an hour, their forces at our gates : The court's difmay'd, the people in alarm, And loud confusion fills the frighted town. But fortune, ere this publick danger reach'd us, Had rais'd five hundred friends, the foes of Gormaz Whose swords resolve to vindicate thy vengeance, And here without expect thee at their head. Forward, my fon, their number foon will swell, Sustain the brunt and fury of the foe; And if thy life's fo painful to be borne, Lay it at least with honour in the duft, Caft it not fruitlest from thee; let thy king First know it's value ere his laws demand it-But time's too precious to be talk'd away. Advance, my fon, and let thy mafter fee, What he has loft in Gormaz is redeem'd in thee.

Car. Relenting Heaven at last has found the means To end my miferies with guiltless honour. Why should I live a burden to myself, A trouble to my friends, a terror to Ximena? Not all the force of mercy, or of merit, Can wash a father's blood from her remembrance, Or reconcile the horror to her love. Yet I'll not think her duty fo fevere, But that to fee me fall my country's victim Would please her passion, tho' it shock'd her ven-It muft be fo--Dying with honour, I [geance: Discharge the son, the subject, and the lover. O! when this mangled body shall be found, A bare and undiffinguish'd carcase 'midft the flain, Will the not weep in pity of my wounds, And own her wrongs have ample expiation? [fpair! Her duty then may with a fecret tear, Confeis her vengeance great, and glorious my de-

dammin Alexania

ACT V.

Bel. VICTORIOUS Carlos, now refume thy hopes,
Demand thy life, and filence thy Ximena,
Hard were thy fate indeed, if the aione

Should be the bar to triumphs nobly purchard.
But see, she comes, with mournful pomp of wee,
To prosecute this darling of the people,
And damp, with ill-tim'd griefs, the publick joy.

Enter Ximena in mourning, attended.

Ximena! Oh! I more than ever now
Deplore the hard afflictions that purfue thee;
While thy whole native country is in joy,
Art thou the only object of despair?

Is this a time to prosecute thy cause,
When publick gratitude is bound t'oppose thee?
When be the head of Carlos, which thy griefs
Demand, fortune has pour'd protection down?
The Moors repuls'd, his country sav'd from rapine,
His menac'd king confirm'd upon his throne,
From every heart but thine, will find a voice
To lift his echo'd praises to the heavens!

Xim. Is't possible? Are all these wonders true? Am I the only mark of his missioning? Could then his fatal sword transpierce my father, Yet save a nation to deseat my vengeance? Still as I pass, the publick voice extola His glorious deeds, regardless of my wrongs; The eye of pity, that but yesternight Let fall a tear in feeling of my cause, Now turns away, retracting it's compassion, And speaks the general geodge at my complaining, But there's a king, whose satted word's his law; Supported by that hope; I still must on, Nor, till by him rejected, can be filent.

Bel. Your duty should recede, when publick good Must suffer in the life your cause pursues.

Xim. But can it be? Was it to Carlos' fword
The nation thus transported owes it safety?
O, let me taste the pleasure and the pain!
Tell me, Belzara, tell me all his glory,
O, let me surfeit on the guilty joy,
Delight my passion, and torment my virtue.

Bel. Alongo, who was present, will inform us.

Alonzo, if your business will permit.

Alon. The abbot, at whose house Count Gormas
Has sent in haste to speak with me; I guess, [lies,
To fix the order of his funeral. [Afide to Belzan.

To fix the order of his funeral. [Afide to Belzan. Bel. Spare us at least a moment from th' occasion, Kirnena has not yet been fully told. The action of our late deliverance;

The fame of Carlos may compose her forrows.

Alon. Permit the action then to praise itself.

Late in the night, at Lord Alvarez house,

Five hundred friends were gather'd in his cause,

T' oppose the vengeance that pursu'd his son;

But in the common danger, brave Alvarez,

With valiant Carlos at their head, preferr'd

The publick safety to their private honour, [Mooth
And march'd with swords determin'd 'gainst the

This brave example, ere they reach'd the harbour,

Increas'd their numbers to three thousand strong.

Bel. Were the Moors landed ere you reach'd the Alon. Not till fome hours after. When we arriv'l,

Our troops were form d, Ximena was the word,
And Carlos foremoft to confront the foe.
The Moors not yet in view, he order'd first
Two thirds of our divided force to lie
Conceal'd i' th' hatches of our ships in harbour;
The rest, whose numbers every moment swell'd,
Halted with Carlos, on the shore, impatient,
And silent on their arms reposing, pass'd
The still remainder of the wasting night.
At length the brightness of the moon presents
Near twenty sail approaching with the tide;
Our order still observ'd, we let them pass;

Th

An

Fo

Up

An

W

At

We

Ald Wh At Our Wh Wh Dro

An

Thi O w

An

The Wh

Let Sur The The And O b

Thi Sup K For Men Our

Allo Our Are

Out

And To

X K But

le in Not

Nor at the port, or walls, a man was feen. This deadness of our filence wings their hopes To feize th' occasion, and furprize us sleeping t And now they disembark, and meet their fate. For at the instant they were half on shore, Uprofe the numbers in our fhips conceal'd, And to the vaulted heaven thunder'd their huzzas, Which Carlos echo'd from his force on shore : At this amaz'd, confusion feiz'd their troops, And ere their chiefs could form them to relift, We press'd them on the water, drove them on The land, then fir'd their fhips to ftop their flight: Howe'er at length their leaders bravely rallying, Recover'd them to order, and a while Suffain'd their courage, and oppos'd our fury : But, when their burning fhips began to flame, The dreadful blaze presenting to their view Their flaughter'd heaps that fell where Carlos fought, (For O, he fought as if to die were victory !) Their fruitlefs courage then refign'd their hopes; And now their wounded king despairing, call'd Aloud, and hail'd our general to furrender, Whom Carlos answering, receiv'd his prisoner. At this, the reft had on submiffion quarter, Our trumpets found, and shouts proclaim our victory : While Carlos bore his captive to his father, Whofe heart transported at the royal prize, Dropp'd tears of joy, and to the king conveyed him; Where now he's pleading for his fon's diffrefs, And alks but mercy for his glorious triumph. [Exit. Xim. Too much ! it is too much, relentles Hea-as'd.

of wee,

ck joy.

e;

hee ?

efs

vn ?

e, ce

rapine,

ra true?

ather,

3;

laining.

law;

ick good

fword

rm ut.

Gorma

s, [lies,

Belgara

ccation,

tfelf.

ufe,

Moon

nft the rbout.

trong.

h'd the arriv't,

ord,

: 100

11'd,

,

ts

n;

Xim. Too much! it is too much, relentiefs HeaTh' oppression's greater than my soul can bear! [v'n!
O wounding virtue! O my tortur'd heart!
Art only thou forbidden to applaud him?
Cannot a nation sav'd appease thy vengeance?
Why, why, just Heaven! are his deeds so glorious,
And only satal to the heart that loves him?

Bel. Compose, Ximena, thy disorder; see,
The king approaches, smiling on Alvarez,
Whose heart o'erflowing, gustes at his eyes,
And speaks his plea too strong for thy complaint.

And speaks his plea too strong for thy complaint.

Xim. Then sleep, my love, and virtue arm'd t'
oppose him,

Let me look backward on his fatal honour,
Survey this mournful pomp of his renown,
These woeful trophies of his conquer'd love,
That thro' my father's life pursu'd his fame,
And made me in his nuptial hopes an orphan:
O broken spirit! would'st thou spare him now,
Think on thy father's blood! exert the daughter,
Suppress thy passion, and demand thy victim.

Enter King, Alvarez, Sanchez, &c.
King. Dismiss thy fears, my friend, and man thy
For while his actions are above reward,
Mercy's of course included in the debt.
Our ablest bounty's bankrupt to his merit,
Our subjects rescu'd from so fierce a soe,
The Moors deseated, ere the rude alarm
Allow'd us time to order our desence,
Our crown protected, and our sceptre fix'd,
Are actions that secure acknowledgment.

Alv. My tears, Sir, better than my words will thank you.

Enter Garcia.

Gar. Don Carlos, Sir, without, attends your plea-And comes furrender'd as his word engag'd, [fure, To answer the appeal of fair Ximena.

King. Attend him to our presence. Xim. O my heart!

King. Ximena, with compassion we shall hear thee,
But must not have thy griefs arraign our justice,
li in his judge thou find'st an advocate:
Not less his virtues, than thy wrongs will plead.

Xim. O fainting cause! but thus my griefs demand him. [Kneeling. [While the King raises Ximena, enter Alonso, and whispers Alvares.

Alw. This inftant, fay'ft thou? Can I leave my fon?
Alon. The matter's more important than your flay.
Make hafte, my lord.

Alw. What can thy transport mean ? Be plain.

Aion. We have no time to lose in words, Away, I fay.

Alv. Lead on, and ease my wonder. [Exeent. Enter Carlos, and kneels to the King. King. Oh, rife, my warrior, raise thee to my

And in thy master's heart repeat thy triumphs.

Car. These honours, Sir, to any sense but mine, Might list it's transports to ambition's height;
But while Ximena's forrows press my heart,
Forgive me, if despairing of repose,
I taste no comfort in the life she seeks;
And urge the issue of her grief's appeal.

King. Ximena, 'tis most true, has lost a father, But thou hast sav'd her country from it's fate, And the same virtue that demands thy life, Owes more than pardon to the publick weal.

Xim. My royal lord, vouchfafe my griefs a hear-Oh, think not, Sir, because my spirits faint, [ing. That the firm conscience of my duty staggers. The criminal I charge, has kill'd my father; And, tho' his valour has preserv'd the state, Yet every subject is not wrong'd like me, Therefore with ease may pardon what they feel not: As he has fav'd a nation from it's foe, The thanks that nation owes him are but juft, And I must join the general voice 't applaud him : But all the tribute that my heart can spare him, Is tears of pity; while my wrongs purfue him, What more than pity can those wrongs afford? What less than justice can my duty ask? If publick obligations must be paid him, Let every fingle heart give equal fhare : (Carlos has prov'd, that mine is not ungrateful) But must my duty yield such disproportion ? Must on my heart a father's blood be levy'd, And my whole ruin pay the publick thanks? If blood for blood might be before demanded, Is it less due, because his fame's grown greater? Shall virtue, that should guard, insult your laws, And tolerate our passions to infringe 'em ? If to defend the publick, may excuse A private wrong, how is the publick fafe? How is the nation from a foe preferv'd, If every subject's life is at his mercy? My duty, Sir, has spoken, and kneels for judgment. Car. Oh, noble spirit, how thou charm'it my

And giv'ft my heart a pleasure in my ruin. [Aside. King. Raise thee, Kimena, and compose thy thoughts.

As thou to Carlos' deeds hast spoke impartial,
So to thy virtue, that pursues him, we Must give an equal plaudit of our wonders
But we have now our duty to discharge,
Which, far from blaming, shall exalt thy own:
If thy chaste same, which we contess sublime,
Compels thy duty to suppress thy love,
To raise yet higher then thy matchless glory,
Preser thy native country to them both,
And to the publick tears resign thy victim.
Where a whole people owe their preservation,
Shall private justice do a publick wrong,
And seed thy vengeance with the general sorrow?

Tim Is then my cause the publick's victim? King. No.

We've yet a hope to conquer thy refentment, And rather would compose than filence it; For if our arguments frem yet too weak To guard thy virtue from the least reproach, Behold the generous far Stion that protects it; Read there the pardon . hich thy father gives him, And with his dying hand affigus thy beauties.

Xim. My father's pardon!

King. Read, and raife thy wonder. Xim. [Reads.] " Alvarez wrong'd me in my mafter's favour, Carlos is brave, and has deferv'd Ximena," Car. Oh, foul of honour! now lamented victory King. Now, fair Ximena, now refume thy peace, Reduce thy vengeance to thy father's will, And join the hand his honour has forgiven.

Xim. Ali-gracious Heaven ! have my fwoin eyes their fenfe !

D. San. Oh, tottering hope I but I have yet a That will compel her virtue to purfue him. [thought Aim. Why did you shew me, Sir, this wounding This legacy, tho' fit for him to leave, [goodness? Would in his daughter be reproach to take; Honour unquestion'd may forgive a fee, But who'll not doubt it when it spares a lover? If you propos'd to mitigate my griefs, You should have hid this cruel obligation. Why would you fet fuch virtues in my view, And make the father dearer than the lover?

King. Since with fuch rigour thou pursu'st thy vengeance,

And what we meant should pacify, provokes it, Attend fubmiffive to our laft refolve For fince thy honour's fo feverely ftrict, As not to ratify thy father's mercy, We'll right at once thy duty and thy lover: Give thee the glory of his life purfu'd, And feal his pardon to reward thy virtue.

Xim. Avert it, Heaven, that e'er my guilty heart Should impiously infult a father's grave, And yield his daughter to the hand that kill'd him.

D. San. Unnatural thought! Madam, suppress your tears,

Your murder'd father was my dearest friend, Permit me, therefore, in your finking cause, To offer an expedient may support it.

Xim. Whatever right or justice may, I am bound In duty to purfue, and thank your friencship.

D. San. Thus then to royal justice I appeal, And in Ximena's right her advocate, Demand from Carlos your reverse of pardon. King. What means thy transport?

D. San. Sir, I urge your laws; And fince her duty's forc'd to their extremes, There's yet alaw from whence there's no appeal, A right, which e'en your crown's oblig'd to grant her, The right of combat, which I here demand, And afk her vengeance from a champion's fword

Car. Oh, facred Sir, I caft me at your feet, And beg your mercy would relieve my woes; Since her firm duty is inflexible, Confign her victim to the braver fword. Grant this expedient to acquir my crime, Or filence with my arm her heart's reproaches : Oh, nothing is to painful as suspence, This way our griefs are equally reliev'd, Her duty's full discharg'd, your justice crown'd, And conquest muft attend fup-rior virtue.

King. This barbarons law, which yet is unrepeal'd, Has often against right, goods wrongs for ported, And robb'd our flate of many noble futjects;

Nor ever was our mercy tempted more oppose it's force, than in our care for Carlos But fince his peace depends upon his love, And cruel love infifts upon it's right, We'll truft his virtues to the chance of combat, And let his face reproach, or win Ximena.

Xim. What unforeseen calamities surround me! King. Ximena! now no more complain, we grant Thy fuit, but where's this champion of thy caufe; Whose appetite of honour is so keen, As to confront in arms this laurell'd brow,

And dore the shining terrors of his sword?
D. San. Behold th' affailant of this glorious hero; Your leave, dread Sir, thus to appel him forth.

Be'. Hold, heart, and spare me from the publick

D. San. Carlos, behold the champion of Ximens, Behold th' avenger of brave Gorman' blood, Who calls thee traitor to thy injur'd love, Ungrateful to the fighe that pitled thee, And proudly partial to thy father's fallhood: These crimes my sword shall prove upon thy hear, And to defend them dares thee to the combat.

Car. Open the lifts, and give the affailant room, There on his life my injur'd fword shall prove, This arm ne'er drew it but in right of honour. First, for thy flander, Sanches, I defy thee, And throwing to thy teeth the traitor's name, Will with the imputation with thy blood; And prove thy virtue falle as lathy fpirit : For not Ximena's cause, but charms have fir'd thee. Vainly thou feal'ft thy courage from her eyes, And bafely ftain'ft the virtue that fubdu'd her.

D. San. Oh, that thy fame in arms-King. Sanchez, forbear 'Tis not your tongues muft arbitrate your ftrife, Let in your lifts your vauntings be approv'd. Whofe arm, Ximena, shall defend your cause Xim. Oh, force of duty ! Sir, the arm of Sanchez.

D. San. My word's my gage.

'Tis well, the lifts are fet-King. Let on the morn the combatants be cited, And, Felix, you be umpire of the field.

Car. The valiant, Sir, are never unprepar'd. Oh, Sir, at once relieve my foul's fuspence, And let this instant hour decide our fate, [Carlos.

D. San. This moment, Sir-I join in that with King. Since both thus press it, be it now decided. Carlos be ready at the trumpet's call. You, Felix, when the combat's done, conduct The victor to our presence-Now, Ximena, As thou art just or cruel in thy duty, Expect the iffue will reward or grieve thee, Sanchez, fet forward-Carlos, we allow Thy pitied love a moment with Ximena.

Exit king and trains D. San. A fruitless moment that must prove his last.

Car. Ximena! Oh, permit me ere I die, To tell thy heart, thy hard unkindness kills me. Xim. Ah, Carlos, can thy plaints reproach my duty,

Nay, art thou more than Sanchez is, in danger? Car. Or thou more injur'd than thy haples father, Whose greater heart forgave my sense of honour? Thou canft not think I fpeak regarding life, Which, hopeless of thy love's not worth my care; But, oh ! it ftrikes me with the laft despair, To think that lov'd Ximena's heart had les Compatition than my mortal enemy; My life had then indeed been worth acceptance, Had thy relenting throes of pity fav'd it : But, as it is purfa'd to thefe extremes,

Oh W Th And Oh, -0

Wi

1

l

0

N

W

H

01

Co

A

Car

Or

An

But 1 C San Thy I mi

Tis Efpy Reft But Upli The Grin

But

Surv Furio And Xi With Be I fear

And Shoul Keep Xi Migh And f Bel

That Had (Where Were The f The n Xim

doub And the May be But le She bi Thus made the victim of superfluous fame, And doom'd the facrifice of filial rigour, These arms shall open to thy champion's sword, And glut the vengeance that supports thy glory

And glut the vengeance that supports thy glory.

Xim. Hast thou no honour, Carlos, to defend?

Car. How can I lose what Sanchez cannot gain?

For where's his honour where there's no resistance?

Is it for me to guard Ximena's foe,

Or turn outrageous on the friendly breaft, [her? Which her diffressful charms have warn'd to right

Xim. Oh, cruel Carlos! thus to rack my heart With hard reproaches, that thou know'ft are ground-Why doft thou talk thus cruelly of death, [lefs; And give me terrors unconceiv'd before? What tho' my force of duty has purfu'd thee, Haft thou not left thy courage to defend thee? Oh, is thy quarrel to our race reviv'd? Couldit thou, to right thy honour, kill my father, And now not guard it to defire? Ximena?

Car. Oh, heav'nly found! Oh, joy unfelt before!
Xim. Oh, is my duty then not thought compulfive!
Can't thou believe I'm pleas'd while I purfue thee!
Or think'ft thou I'm not pleas'd the king preferv'd

And that thy courage yet may ward my vengeance? Oh, if thou knew's what transports fill'd my heart, When fiss I heard the Moors had fled before thee, Thy love would feel confusion for my shame, And scarce forgive the passion thou reproachest. Oh, Carlos, guard thy life, and save Ximena!

Oh, Carlos, guard thy life, and fave Ximena!

Car. And fave Ximena! Oh, thou haft fir'd my
With animated love, and fav'd thy Carlos! [heart
But hark, the trumpet calls me to the lift!

But hark, the trumpet calls me to the lift!

Xim. May Heav'n's high care, and all it's angels guard thee!

[fhall speak it.

Car. Words would but wrong my heart, my fword Sanchez, I come, impatient to chaftife
Thy love, which makes thee now the criminal:
I might have spar'd thee, had the rival slept,
But boldly thus avow'd, thou'rt worth my sword—
'Tis said the lion, tho' distress'd for food,
Espying on the turf the huntsman sleeping,
Restrains his hunger, and forbears the prey;
But when his rousing foe, alarm'd and ready,
Uplifts his jav'lin brandish'd to affail him,
The generous savage then erects his crest,
Grinds his sharp sangs, and with sierce eyes instam'd,
Surveys him worthy of his rage defy'd,

Furious uprearing rushes on the game,
And crowns at once his vengeance and his fame. [Ex.
Xim. Oh, glorious spirit! Oh, hard-fated virtue!

With what reluctance has my heart pursu'd thee?

Bel. Was ever breast like mine with woe divided?

I fear the dangers of the faithless Sanchez,

And tremble more for his dread sword's success:

Should Carlos fall, what stops him from Ximena?

Keep down my fighs, or feem to rife for her. [Afide. Xim. Tell me, Belgara, was my terror blameful? Might not his passion make my heart relent, And feel at such a time a pang to save him?

Bel. So far was your compassion from a crime,
That 'tis th' exalted merit of your duty:
Had Carlos been a stranger to your heart,
Where were the virtue that your griefs pursu'd him?
Were it no pain to lose him, where the glory?
The facrifice that's great, must first be dear;
The more you lose that so the stranger to your heart.

The more you love, the nobler is your victim.

Xim. Thy partial friendship fees not sure my fault;
I doubt my youthful ignorance has err'd,
And the strict matron, rigidly severe,
May blame this weakness of my woman's heart;
But let her seel my trial first; and if
She blames me then, I will repent the crime.

Hark, hark the trumpet! Oh, tremendous found!
Belzara, oh, the combat is began!
The agonizing terror shakes my foul:
Help me, support me with thy friendly comforte;
Oh, tell me what my duty owes a parent,
And warm my wishes in his champion's favour!
Oh, Heav'n, it will not, will not be! my heart
Rebels, and spite of me inclines to Carlos,
Who now again, in Sanchez, fights my father;
Now he attacks him, presses, now retreats,
Again recovers, and resumes his fire,
Now grows too strong, and is at last triumphant!

Bel. Restrain thy thoughts, collect thy constancy, Give not thy heart imaginary wounds; Thy virtue must be Providence's care.

Xim. Oh, guard me, Heav'n! help me to hupport it—Ah! [Trumpers and flowers. 'Tis done! the dreadful flouts proclaim the victor's If Carlos conquers, fill I've loft a father; And If he perifies, then—die Ximena!

Bel. Conquer who may, no hope supports Belvara,
Enter Garcia. [Afte.

Came you, Don Garela, from the combat ?

The king, to hew he disapproves the custom, Forbade his own domesticks to be present. [Shouts But I presume 'tis done; these shouts confirm it; Hence from this window we may guess the victor.

Xim. Oh, tell me quickly, while I've fense to hear thee! [his sword, Gar. Oh, Heav'n | 'tis Sanches! I see him with

In trlumph preffing through the crowd his way.

Xim. Sanchez!—thou'it fure deceiv'd. Oh, betInform thy dazzled eyes!

[ter yet]

Gar. 'Tis certain he; For now he stops and seems to warn them back : The crowd retires, I see him plain, and now He mounts the steps that lead to this apartment.

Xim. Then fatal vengeance, thou art dearly fated.
Now love unbounded may o'erflow my heart,
And Carloa' fate without a crime be mourn'd.
Oh, Sanchez, if poor Carlos told me true,
If 'twas thy love, not honour fought my cause,
Thy guilt has purchas'd with thy sword my feorn,
And made thy passion wretched as Ximena.

Bel. Oh, Heav'n support her nobler resolution!
But see, he comes to meet the disappointment.
Enter Don San. and lays bis Sword at Ximena's Feet.
D. San. Madam, this sword, that in your canse

Xim. Stain'd with the blood of Carlos, kills XiD. San. I come to mitigate your griefs. [mena!
Xim. Avaunt, avoid me, wing thee from my fight!
Oh, thou hast giv'n me for revenge despair,
Hast ravish'd with thy murderous arm my peace,
And robb'd my wishes of their dearest object!

D. San. Those forrows, would you hear my flory Xim. Hence!

To regions distant as thy foul from joy,
Fly, and in gloomy horrors waste the life:
Remorfe, and pale affliction wait thee to Thy rest, repose for take thee, frightful dreams
Alarm thy sleeps, and in thy waking hours,
May woes like mine pursue thy steps for ever!

Bel. Oh, charming rage! how cordially the hater him!

King. What, fill in teers, Ximena ! Still com-Cannot thy duty's full discharge content thee?

t,

5

me! grant tufe;

hero; hero; blick dfide. nena,

eart,

.

thee.

chez.

d. Carlos. with cided.

æ

train.
is laft.
[Exit.

me.

er? father,

carej

nce,

Repin'st thau at the act of Providence, [cree ? Drive all thy forrows from thy finking heart, And think'st thy cause still wrong'd in Heav'n's de- And crown thy duty with triumphant love.

Xim. Oh, far, Sir, from my foul be fuch a thought!

I bow fubmiffive to high Heav'n's appointment; But is affiction impious in it's forrow Tho' vengeance to a father's blood was due, Is it less glorious that I pris'd the victim? Has nature lost it's privilege to weep, When all that's valuable in life is gone? Oh, Carlos, Carlos, I hall foon be with thee! [na,

King. Are then thefe tears for Carlos ? O, Xime-The vanquish'd Sanches has deceiv'd thy grief, And made this trial of thy generous heart For know, thy Carlos lives, and lives t'adore thee.

Xim. What means my royal lord?

King. Inform her, Sanches. [before, D. San. The fortune of the combat I had told Had, Sir, her fright endur'd to hear my fpeech ; I would have told you, Madam, as oblig'd In honour to the conquering fword of Carlos, How nobly, for your fake, he spar'd your champion, When on the earth, fuccumbent and difarm'd I lay: ' Live, Sanchez,' faid the generous yietor, The life that fights Ximena's cause is facred; Take back thy fword, and at her feet prefent The glorious trophy which her charms have won, The last oblation that despair can make her!'-Touch'd with the noble fulness of his heart, I flew to execute the grateful charge; But, Madam, your affright miftook the victor, And your impatient griefs refus'd me audience.

King. Now think, Ximena, one moment think Xim. Oh, love! oh, persecuted heart! [for Carlos. Infruct me, Heaven, to Support my fame, To right my passion, and revere my father.

D. San. And now, with just confusion, Sir, I In me 'twas guilty love that drew my fword. [own But fince th' event has crown'd a nobler paffion, I plead the merit of that fword's defeat, Regret the error, and intreat for pardon.

King. Sanchez, thy crime is punish'd in itself: We late have heard of thy retracted vows, Which on thy ftrict allegiance we enjoin Thy honour inflantly to ratify Suppress thy tears, Belzara, he shall right thee. Xim. 'Tis fix'd-a beam of heav'nly light breaks And hews my ruin'd peace it's last refource. [forth, Gar. Don Carlos, Sir, attends your royal pleasure. King. Has he your leave, Ximena, to approach?

Xim. Oh, Sir, yet hold! I dare not fee him now : While my depending justice was my guard, I faw him fearless from affaults of love; But now my vanquish'd vengeance dreads his merit, And conscious duty warns me to avoid him. Since then my heart's impartial to his virtues, Oh, do not call me cruel to his love If I, in reverence to a father's blood, Should that my forrows ever from his fight! For tho' you raife above mankind his merit, And I confess it-fill he has kill'd my father Nay, tho' I grant the fact may plead for mercy, . Yet 'twould in me be impious to reward it; My eyes may mourn, but never must behold him Yet, ere I part, let, Sir, my humbleft fense [more. First pay your duty there, hafte to his feet, [them; Applaud your mercy, and confess your justice. Hence to fome facred cloifter I'll retire, And dedicate my future days to Heav'n-'Tis done-Oh, lead me to my peaceful celi, One figh for Carlos-Now, vain world, farewel!

As Ximena is going off, enter Alvarez and Alonzo.

Alv. Turn, turn, Ximena; oh, prepare to hear A ftory will distract thy sense with joy;

Pardon, dread Sir, this tumult of my foul, That carries in my rudenels my excuse; Oh, prefe me not to tell particulars, But let my tidings leap at once the bounds Of your belief, and in one burft of joy Inform my royal mafter, that his crown's fupport, My vanquil'd friend, thy father, Gormas lives ! He lives in health confirm'd from mortal danger; Thefe eyes have feen him, thefe bleft arms embrac' The means, th' occasion of his death fuppos'd, [him, Would alk more words than I have breath to utter. Alongo knows it all-Oh! where's my Carlos? King. Fly, Sanches, make him with this news thy friend. Alw. Oh, lead me, lead me to his heart's relief! [Eneunt Alv. and San.

Xim. Oh, Heav'n ! Alvares would not fure deceive me.

King. Proceed, Alongo, and impart the whole; Whence was his death fo firmly credited, And his recovery not before reveal'd?

Alon. My liege, the great effution of his blood Had such effect on his deserted spirits, That I, who faw him, judg'd him quite expir'd: But when the Abbot, at whose house he lay, With rriendly forrow wash'd his hopeless wound, His heaving breaft discover'd life's return : When calling ftraight for help, on ftricter fearch, His wound was found without a mortal fymptom: And when his fenfes had refum'd their function, His first words spoke his generous heart's concern For Carlos and Ximena; when being told How far her filial vengeance had purfu'd him, 'Is't possible?' he cry'd, 'oh, Heav'n !' then wept, And begg'd his life might be one day conceal'd, That fuch exalted merit of her duty Might raise her virtue worthy of his love. But, Sir, to tell you how Alvarez met him, What generous reconcilements pals'd between them, Would afk more time than publick joy could ipare. Let it suffice, the moment he had heard Ximena had appeal'd brave Carlos to the lifts. We flew with terror to proclaim him living-But, Sir, fo foon the combat follow'd your Decree, that, breathless, we arriv'd too late, And had not his phyficians, Sir, prescrib'd His wound repose, himself had ventur'd forth To throw his errors at your feet for pardon.

King. Not only pardon, but our love fall greet Brave Carlos shall himself be envoy of [him-Our charge, and gratulate his blefs'd recovery Has he your leave, Ximena, now t'approach you?

Xim. My fenfes itagger with tumultuous joy, My fpirit's hurry to my heart's furprize, And finking nature faints beneath the transport.

Enter Alvarez, Sanchez, and Carlos. King. Look up, Ximena, and compleat thy joy. Xim. My Carlos! - Oh!

Car. Ximena! Oh, my heart! [Embracis Alw. Oh, Carlos! Oh, Ximena! yet suppress Embracing. Thefe transports till kind Gormaz' hand confirms And let his fanction confecrate your love.

King. Lose not a moment from his fight-Oh, Tell him his king congratulates his health, [Ayl And will with loads of honour crown his virtues; Nor in his orifons let him forget

The hand of Heav'n, whose providential care Has order'd all, the innocent to fave, To right the injur'd, and reward the brave!